Trademarks

Establishing and protecting trademark rights is a key component of our intellectual property practice. Our attorneys obtain a comprehensive understanding of the clients’ business and marketing strategies to ensure that trademarks are both protected against unauthorized use and exploited in a manner that gives our clients assurance that no rights are being violated.

We provide U.S. and global strategies for trademark protection. Whether counseling small or large businesses, our attorneys have the depth of experience and expertise required to address issues in a wide array of industries.

Our attorneys handle all types of trademark disputes, including domain name issues, our attorneys are well-equipped to fortify our clients’ current trademark portfolios and guide the selection and protection of new marks for products and services. Whether conducting U.S. or international trademark searches or prosecuting a trademark application, our attorneys make sure that our clients receive proper trademark protection. We have substantial experience in licensing and related transactional practice areas to enable our clients to maximize business opportunities.

Waiting to Enforce your Trademark Rights
Owning a trademark brings certain benefits and obligations. If you are the first entity in a particular geographic area to use a distinctive word (or phrase, logo, color, etc.) to sell a product or to provide a service, then you may claim exclusive rights in that area for that trademark on those products or services. Your trademark rights allow you to preclude subsequent entities in the same area from using the same, or confusingly similar, trademark on related products or services. Read more
