Family Law Mediation

When a couple is going through a divorce, it is often one of the most vulnerable times in their lives. However, divorce litigation is often stressful, expensive and unpredictable. Instead of undergoing a lengthy, expensive, and complex litigation process — pursuing a divorce mediation can be a much more cost-effective and satisfying option for many couples.

Mediation is a form of alternative dispute resolution (ADR) where spouses meet with a specially trained, neutral third-party called a mediator. The mediator helps the couple to work through their emotions, re-establish a rational level of communication, and reach an agreement that will bring the divorce to a civil resolution so that the couples can move forward with their lives. Mediation has proven to be successful with helping a couple to reach agreements regarding many aspects of their divorce case, including alimony/spousal support, child custody, child support and division of marital property.

The experienced family law attorneys at Williams Family Law, P.C., have successfully served as effective mediators for many individuals and families. We realize that mediation is a cost-effective and more peaceful alternative in which to work through divorce issues. We are available to provide you with experienced guidance, compassionate advice, and powerful advocacy throughout the mediation process.

The Benefits of Family Law Mediation

Mediation is a beneficial alternative for spouses who are willing to take a straightforward and sensible approach towards their divorce process. In addition to offering significant cost-savings and a streamlined process, mediation is also more flexible and less adversarial than divorce litigation. For couples who are ending their marriage on peaceful terms, mediation can be a first step towards establishing positive communication once their divorce is finalized.

Although many issues can be resolved through mediation, it may not be an appropriate alternative in certain cases.
